

The Canadian Association of Journalists present:

An Evening with Paul Gross

Political Journalism meets Political Drama

Wednesday, October 13, 2004 - 6:15 p.m.

NATIONAL PRESS CLUB

(Booth Building, 165 Sparks Street - on the Sparks Street Mall, just west of O'Connor)

What insights did one of Canada's leading actors and dramatic writers gain into our federal political process and how the media cover it while making a political thriller on Parliament Hill?

Paul Gross's latest project is H2O, a gripping two-part political thriller co-written by him. The plot begins when the Prime Minister of Canada dies in a canoe accident and his son, played by Gross, takes over as Canada's new Prime Minister. It airs on CBC Television on Sunday, October 31, at 8 p.m. and concludes Monday, November 1.

While researching the script and during filming in Ottawa earlier this year, Paul learned a lot about our federal political process and how the media cover it. He'll share those insights with CAJ members and guests at this special event, as well as other views of Canada's national cultural scene.

Paul is internationally known for his role as Constable Benton Fraser on the multi award-winning internationally broadcast drama series Due South, which earned him a Gemini Award for Best Actor in 1995 and 1996.

In 2000, he wrote, directed and starred in the feature film Men with Brooms, which was the highest grossing English speaking Canadian film of the past twenty years
